

Spectacle

Saving the spectacle

This is a time that none of us has truly ever experienced.

A time where it can be hard to stay motivated in your craft.

We can look at this pandemic as an enemy, an invisible enemy.

But we must continue...

Thinking about how we can continue this process and still create and experience the energy we had back in the studio can seem impossible. Unimaginable. We have so much power in what we do. During this crazy time, it's been about how we're going to say it. We have the power to create the energy and emotion this work would have made. The smiles we wanted to see in the audience.

Thinking about our tools and creative minds. Thinking about the team we have created and want to continue growing. The use of different mediums such as writing, audio, film/ social media are ways we are staying connected. Keeping this spectacle alive. Now we have the power to create, and it may be even more than we imagined.

This is a time that none of us have truly ever experienced, but what can we experience to make it worth it.

We're in this together.
